By ArcGIS2014

This book has two major flaws:

1. There are such significant copy & paste and other editorial errors that the intent of many sentences is unclear. Specifically, the Midterm assignment is almost incomprehensible. This problem worsens as the book continues.
2. Some of the data required to complete the assignments is missing (i.e. empty folders/maps download from his website). Specifically, the Select assignment has a non-functional map.

It could be a good introduction if the data were consistent with the text

By Joann A. Lawler

The content of this introductory text is well structured, but the data supplied (from web locations listed in the preface) frequently does not match the data referenced in the exhibits and instructions. An extreme example is Chapter 9, Using Attribute Data, for which the example file's tables have no attributes! You can find the right tables, but it's supposed to be preloaded in the map files.

As noted by ARCGIS2014 above, the typographical errors which affect the instructions become more prevalent in the second half of the book. Some instructions appear to be holdovers from prior versions, as well, using slightly different phrasing of menu options.
