About the Author

Now the author of more than 60 books for preschoolers, Steve Metzger started his career with many assignments that had nothing to do with children's books or publishing. After graduation from Baruch College, he drove cabs, washed dishes, worked as a hotel clerk and handled a variety of other positions. He eventually found his way to the Bank Street College of Education, where he earned a master's degree in education in 1981. That led to a decade of work as a preschool teacher, and then, in 1992, to publishing giant Scholastic, which issues and retails books, CDs and DVDs for preschool-grade 12 students and their teachers. Since 2004, he has been vice president and editorial director of all Scholastic book clubs, managing a program which today reaches 10 million students in 500,000 schools.

He became a writer solely by luck. During a Scholastic staff meeting, he suggested that the company do more books about children at preschool. Jean Feiwel, then publisher, asked whether the characters should be changed from children to dinosaurs, and the name Dinofours popped into his mind, Metzger recalls.

Jean asked me if I wanted to write a sample story, and a voice inside my brain screamed, Say yes, he goes on, explaining how the Dinofours series got started.

Although Scholastic editorial commitments keep him in the headquarters offices most weekdays, Metzger continues to make some school visits, mostly in Manhattan. I love the energy I get from children during classroom story times, he says, and I try to watch and listen to children whenever I'm around them.

Unlike many writers, Metzger admits he wasn't much of a reader as a child. He spent almost all of his childhood in Kew Gardens Hills in Queens NY, where he was far more interested in active play. I didn't like to sit still for very long, says the writer something that may have helped him with the verses for the kids who bounce, splash and high-five through The Way I Act.

Today Metzger lives near Central Park in a household focused on writing. Wife Nancy Novick writes on health and medicine, and daughter Julia has been the inspiration for some of Metzger's stories, most of which have been published as 32-page Scholastic paperbacks. You'll see many of them described at his website at stevemetzgerbooks.

A companion to Cain's award-winning 2000 title, The Way I Feel, The Way I Act uses detailed illustrations, type faces and vivid color to complement the simple verses that explain character traits like compassion and bravery. With verses created by Metzger, The Way I Act follows the pattern established by The Way I Feel, introducing a wide variety of character traits, including some not usually attributed to young children. Metzger's carefully crafted text is sensitive and free of bias and slang. Together with Cain's sometimes zany characters, The Way I Act shows scenarios that kids can identify with peering at bugs with a magnifying glass, making a bed, finishing a puzzle, sweeping up a mess. The text cites even more examples that define words such as curious, responsible, persistent and capable. As Metzger points out, the scenarios on each two-page spread let kids imagine how they might act on a curlicue slide, when meeting new children, when an elderly grandparent needs help. Chicago-based Cain made her debut with The Way I Feel, now available in Spanish as Así me siento yo, and as a board book. In print: almost 1.5 million copies. She is also the author of Roonie B. Moonie (Illumination Arts). Metzger, an executive with Scholastic Inc., has written more than 60 books for preschoolers, most published by Scholastic.

Review from Books That Heal Kids

By Books That Heal Kids

As an elementary school counselor, I've taken a bigger interest in teaching character education the past couple of years. I'm noticing kids want to learn about the big behavior words like compassionate, persistent, and capable (and let's not forget it's a great way to increase their vocabulary). Thanks to this wonderful new book, The Way I Act, they also want to apply these words to their daily lives. Just yesterday, a 2nd grade boy came up to me and said, "I was trustworthy when my brother asked me to stay out of his room." It's also nice to use the language back to kids like, "Thanks for following all the directions. You are very capable." The bond books create between adult and child is pretty powerful if you ask me. This is one of those books! Helping kids improve behavior and grow into wonderful people 'seems to be the goal of this book. It's very well done. I feel so lucky when I have such a fantastic book like this to help kids succeed and also have reflection about their decisions and actions. The kids will delight in illustrator Janan Cain's vivid depiction of each character trait. Don't pass this one up. Fabulous way to teach important character traits.

Buy this book!

By Consumer in Chicago

This book is full of great concepts that are easy for kids to grasp...and remember. I use this book with my little girl who enjoys the pictures and appreciates hearing the gentle messages from someone other than me! The book's messages really hit home for me when I caught my daughter trying hard to behave herself (in the library), telling me that she was "acting just like the book said to"! Thanks for the assist.

My 5 year old with behavior issues is learning from this

By Sharon

Metzger's behavior books require probably a 5 or 6 year old level of development and self-knowledge to understand the feelings and actions that are described. I bought these for a five year old with behavior issues. She told me that she wants more of these books! To me, that is a "five out of five."
